Notice to the Tax-payers of Wood County, Ohio,

In pursuance of law, I, JOHN A. BONNELL, Treasurer of Wood County, Ohio, do hereby notify the hax-payers thereof, that the amount of taxes assessed on the tax duplicate for the year 1855, for the different purposes named, is correctly stated in the above abstract; also the rate of taxation, showing the number of mills on every dollar valuation in each of the termships, and incorporated villages of said sound; is correctly given in the above table. You are also notified that every person charged with any tax on the tax duplicate of 1865, now in my hands, may, at his option, instead of paying the whole amount with which he stands charged, on or before the 20th of December, as hereinfore required, pay one-half of same, plus all road faxes and delinquencies, on or before the 20th of December next, and the balance on or before the 20th of June, 1866. For the purpose of receiving taxes, I will attend, in person, or by deputy, at my office, in this place, from now notif the 20th day of January, to receive the taxes on the first half, and from the 15th of April to the 20th of July, 1866, to receive the taxes on the taxt half. The law allows the Trassurer a panelty of the per cent, on each delinquent half, respectively, after the 20th of the combor and 20th of June, as a compensation for extra service in collecting, which smount, if added, will be in addition to the above rates.

The following beautiful poem was recited by Miss Lizzur Dorgs, at the close of a recent lecture, delivered in Boston, on the Life and Character of our Martyred President :3

Sie Semper Tyrannis !" O, sentence of might, When pronounced in the service of Freedom and Right! Yet how false is its meaning to true hearts and brave, When it falls from the lips of the coward and Rach drop of the blood that so basely was shed, a mountain shall rear on the parricide's And to those who arged on the foul flend in his track, Thus ever with Trainers!" we answer them back.

The words of your motto have scaled your own fate; The blood of the bondman cried out from the soil; The tears of his anguish, the sweat of his toil— The right arm of Justice was bared for the blow, And the pride of the tyrant in dust is laid low; And when the last hope of Rebellism shall fic, "Thus ever with Traitors!" shall sound from on

"Sic Semper Tyransis!" The judgments of God Are written in letters of blood on your sod. Oh, where was your mercy when true hearts and brave,
By slow, wasting famins, went down to the grave?
Aye, the walls of your prison a story can tell,
Which would put to the block e'en the demons

in hell;
But the arrow of Justice unerring has sped—
"Thus ever with Traitors!" in judgment is said. "Sie Semper Tyrannis!" That sentence repeat,

When your hosts shall be scattered in hopeled defeat; Nor fail to remember that you were the first To kindle the flames of Rebellion accursed, Our protest went down from the North to the South, Till we thundered it forth from the cannon's red And the dust of our fathers re-echoed the cry-

'Thus ever with Traitors!" Aye, thus let them

"Sic Semper Tyrannis!" Our life has not fled, Though a blow has been struck at the National Head; It but adds now impulse, and gives a fresh start. To the true loyal blood in the National heart; And the future shall prove, when the conflict is done,
That the hearts of the people are beating as one;
And the words from our lips that in judgment shall fall— "Thus ever with Traitsrs !" is echoed by all.

3 Western Shetch. THE BOY AND THE PANTHER.

It was a fine morning in August, when little Samuel Euton, about seven years old, was making a dam in the brook that ran before his father's door. He was an only and beautiful child, and his mother almost idolized him. There he was, with his trousers tucked up above his knees, working like a beaver, his mother's eyes gleaming out from beneath his sunburnt hair, and with some o his fath r's strength, tugging at a large stone in the bed of a stream.

"Samuel, you had better come in hadn't you?" said Hannah, in a tone of half moth-No." said Samuel.

An acorn came floating down the atream.

The boy took it up, looked at it, was pleased, and "reckoned in his mind that there were more up the guiley," and when his mother's back was turned, off he started for the acorns. The gorge of the mountain which he was about to enter, had been formed (the work of many centuries) by the attrition of the walking on the level that bordered each vine. An almost perpendicular wall or bank ascended on each side to the hight of one hundred test, composed of rocks and crags, fretted by decay and storm into fantastic shapes and positions. A few scattered bushes and trees sought nourishment from the earth that had fallen from the level entrance a cataract closed the gorge, throwing up its white veil of mut in seeming guardianship of the spirit of waters.
